KOREA

"I came to New Zealand for a different education system. My parents wanted me to go abroad early and have a more relaxed life, such as for education and sports.

As for English, they wanted me to get better at English rapidly, so they decided to send me to Whangarei, where few Koreans live.

Now I'm very satisfied that my life has changed, especially my school life."

Pompallier Catholic College History

Pompallier Catholic College is named after Bishop Jean Baptiste Francois Pompallier, who led the first group of Catholic missionaries from Lyons, France, to New Zealand.

Arriving at the Hokianga with a number of Marist Priests and Brothers in 1838, he quickly set about learning the Māori language and meeting the needs of Catholics already present in New Zealand.

This early group of missionaries went on to establish churches and health and education services throughout New Zealand.

In 2002 Bishop Pompallier's remains were disinterred from his homeland of France and, after a hīkoi (journey) which included a visit of his casket to Pompallier Catholic College, were re-interred at Motuiti on the shore of the Hokianga Harbour on 20 April 2002.

Pompallier Catholic College students:

BRAZIL

“I came to New Zealand to improve my English and to have a different experience in a high school. Before I chose New Zealand, I searched for other countries, but when I researched for information about New Zealand, I liked that, but I was afraid about all the different things. In the end, I came and fell in love with this country, the city and also with this amazing school!! Selecting New Zealand was the best choice that I could have made.”

Yumi Nishijima
JAPAN

"Why did I come to New Zealand? Because I wanted to know a lot of differences between Japan and New Zealand. I found some differences to do with the "Age of Chivalry". Japanese boys don't do that! When I came to this school first, a guy held a door open for me. I was shocked!! But it is usual here. I think Japanese guys should follow NZ'ers. I have many friends who are kind but funny! So I'm really enjoying New Zealand life. To tell the truth, I don't want to go back to Japan."

JAPAN

“I came to New Zealand because I wanted to study English.

In Japan, we studied English which has two types: American English and British English.

In Japan we study American English, so my pronunciation is Americanised. When I came to New Zealand, many people sounded different to me and it made me confused.

But now that I have spent six months in New Zealand my pronunciation has changed to British English. I think it’s better than American English.”

To: International Department
Subject: Thank You!!

Hay everyone!

I just wanted to say a big thank you to all of you. I came in the middle of last year from the other side of the world in Brazil to Whangarei. As I am from a school of about 2,000 students I couldn't imagine how it's going to be at a smaller one. But what I can definitely say is that it has been just great!

All of you have such a friendly way, which you just have to love. Also a big thank you to all the teachers who did not give up on my bad English!

And to all the Year 13 students I don't know what to say - you have been just awesome! You made me feel welcome right from the very first day ... I'm gonna miss you all.

So I hope it might be more a “see you later” than a goodbye and whenever any of you decide to come to Brazil, let me know.
